BREAST CANCER RISK REDUCTION: CHEMOPREVENTION OPTIONS FOR HIGH-RISK, POSTMENOPAUSAL WOMEN

COURSE OVERVIEW
This program will benefit all clinicians interested in the latest information on chemopreventive agents for breast cancer risk reduction. This includes surgeons, medical oncologists, gynecologists, physician extenders, nurses, and other health care professionals. The program format offers didactic presentations during a complimentary dinner with ample time for questions and discussion.

OBJECTIVES
At the end of this educational activity, participants should be able to:
• Identify patients who are at risk of developing invasive breast cancer.
• Discuss the mechanisms by which medications targeted toward breast cancer risk reduction prevent tumor growth.
• Describe efficacy and safety data from recent clinical trials on chemoprevention agents for patients at risk for breast cancer.
• Integrate a SERM into a treatment plan for a patient at high risk for developing breast cancer.

CONTINUING EDUCATION CREDIT
The University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine is accredited by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education to provide continuing medical education for physicians.

The University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine designates this education activity for a maximum of 2.0 Category 1 credits toward the AMA PRA Category 1 Credits™. Each physician should only claim credit commensurate with the extent of their participation in the activity.

Other health care professionals are awarded 0.2 continuing education units (CEUs) which are equal to 2.0 contact hours.
