About UPMC St. Margaret Hospital…

UPMC St. Margaret is a tertiary referral hospital of the University of Pittsburgh Medical Center located on the north shore of the Allegheny River in the Pittsburgh Suburb of Aspinwall, Pennsylvania.

UPMC St. Margaret serves as a primary and tertiary health care resource for Pennsylvania residents of Northern Allegheny, Butler, Westmoreland and Armstrong Counties.

Medical education of future generations of physicians and nurses remains an important focus at UPMC St. Margaret. It is the primary clinical site for the nationally recognized Family Medicine Residency program established in 1971. The University of Pittsburgh’s Department of Surgery is also closely aligned with the surgical activity at St. Margaret. Over 5000 major operations were performed at St. Margaret in 2007.

UPMC St. Margaret is also the site of the UPMC St. Margaret School of Nursing which was founded in 1910. In addition, UPMC St. Margaret has formed academic partnerships with area universities to provide onsite advanced nursing education.

The multidisciplinary cancer care at St. Margaret is an integral part of the community hospital activity of the University of Pittsburgh’s Hillman Cancer Center. State of the art cancer care is provided by the care team who are themselves members of the Hillman Cancer Center. In 2006, The American College of Surgeons also recognized St. Margaret’s Community Comprehensive Cancer Care Program as one of the Nation’s “Centers of Excellence” in cancer care.

The Lung and Thoracic Diseases Center of UPMC St. Margaret is a multidisciplinary care group of pulmonary medicine specialists, thoracic surgeons, medical oncologists and radiation oncologists of the University of Pittsburgh’s medical faculty. The Center provides coordinated, comprehensive care to those patients with benign and malignant diseases of the chest.
